DEVELOPING THE PEOPLE AND IDEAS FOR NEXT GENERATION PUBLIC FINANCE

The Center for State and Local Finance connects policymakers, practitioners, and academics in public finance through innovative policy research and consulting, as well as premier executive education for state and local leaders.

CENTER LEADERSHIP

The Center for State and Local Finance is led by Jorge Martinez-Vazquez, Regents’ Professor of Economics at the Andrew Young School. He is a public economics specialist and has published over 20 books and numerous articles in academic journals, such as Econometrica and Journal of Political Economy. He has extensive international experience having directed or participated in projects in over 90 countries often in partnerships with international donors, such as the World Bank. Under his direction, the center operates as part of the school’s Public Finance Research Cluster, which uses natural synergies and staff expertise to increase the impact of the school’s public finance research and training in the United States and abroad.
